Craziest Colander-Heads*

Wednesday night is Colander-Head Night at the ShowBiz Fabulous Fall Festival. Because everybody with a decorated

Actual Scene from Dragon's Lair

“I Felt The Icy Claw of A Skeleton’s Hand”

Video Game Whiz Lives To Tell of Dragon's Lair Adventure

“Skulls were dancing at my feet. Then out of a dark room came a giant skeleton’s claw! I swung my sword just in time to shatter the bones into a million pieces! But I wasn’t out of danger yet. Quicksand poured into the dungeon. I had to jump fast and make a run for it!”

There’s always something new and exciting at ShowBiz. For video game whiz Bobby Joystick, it’s the most exciting and challenging video game in the country – “Dragon’s Lair,” now in most ShowBiz playrooms.

“Most video games are pretty much alike, except for Dragon’s Lair,” says Bobby. “In Dragon’s Lair, I’m the star of my own cartoon adventure!”

Colander-Head Mania Sweeps Nation

“Colander-Head Movement Can’t be Contained” declares Grand Poopah.

Your friendly paper boy. That little old lady in the supermarket check-out line. The busy executive you see on the way to work each morning. They look like normal everyday people, until Wednesday night when a bizarre transformation takes place. As the sun sinks below the horizon, these same average people fall under a spell of zany, irrational behavior. A wild light burns in their eyes. They giggle uncontrollably. They steal into the family kitchen and rifle through the pots and pans. Mothers moan. Children cry. No spaghetti tonight; vegetables go unscrubbed and unstrained. The Colander-Heads have struck again.

But that’s only the beginning. Unspeakably wild gatherings take place. Under the direction of their leader, the Grand PooPah Fatz, a singing gorilla, the Colander-Heads come together at ShowBiz Pizza Places across the nation to display their outrageous decorations. They compete for prizes. And as Colander-Head Mania grows, the competition grows into a frenzy. The colanders are becoming more and more fantastic, and there appears no end to the insanity of this escalation.

But the Colander-Heads don’t care. They’re hooked. They seek new converts to join them in their madness. Until, finally, even the most resistant anti-Colander-Heads will be straining their spaghetti one night, when suddenly the urge will arise and without warning, their colanders – spaghetti and all – will find their way to the tops of their heads. What about you? Be honest. Haven’t you, if only for a moment, felt the urge to strain your brain with a Colander-Head. To dress it up with doodah’s, knicknacks, and thingamabobs. Go ahead. You know you want to. Give in. Let it happen. Colander-Head Mania strikes again!

“COLANDER DIET” GUARANTEES IMMEDIATE WEIGHT LOSS

“The most fattening foods are sauces, gravies, dressings, and high-calorie drinks,” explains Dr. Herman Barnowl, “So the best way of cutting down on these foods is to serve them in a colander.”

Dr. Barnowl’s principle is a simple one. The common kitchen colander when used as a serving dish strains out most of the high-calorie liquid contents.

Serving Suggestion

“The result is a good, solid diet,” concludes the diet doctor, “and after dinner, the colander makes an attractive hat when decorated and worn on the head... but you should rinse it out first.”

ASTROLOGICAL COLANDER: Madame Moon Reads The Stars

Madame Moon – Astrologer

As I gaze into the stars of my Astrological Colander, sometimes they don’t look like stars at all, but two triangles going in different directions. Sometimes they seem to point up. Sometimes down. Sometimes sideways. Or sometimes if I look close enough, I just see a bunch of little round holes surrounding a hole in the middle. Did you know that it always takes six holes to completely surround the hole in the middle. That’s why the stars are six-pointed. The order of the universe is perfectly mathematical for those who see and understand.

Astronomer Claims

“Universe Is Really Upside Down Colander”

It’s the discovery of the century!” exclaims Dr. Carl Sanguine, referring to his recent finding that the universe is not a vast space filled with stars, planets, and galaxies, but is in reality a giant colander tuned upside down.

The implications of his discovery are far-reaching. Notes Dr. Sanguine, “If the universe is a giant colander, then all those billions and billions of lights out there are not stars at all, but holes. So there must be some kind of giant light behind the colander shining through the holes, maybe a big flashlight or something.”

Dr. Carl Sanguine – Astronomer

Dr. Sanguine intends to continue experiments to prove his theory. Currently, he is testing to see if the rings of Saturn are giant strands of spaghetti. “Or maybe ring noodles,” he adds.

Movie Queen Doris Freckles Reveals Amazing Beauty Secret

“I owe My Career To My Colander,” she says.

Those cute little puppy-dog freckles that skyrocketed Doris to fame and fortune on film are not all the gift of Mother Nature it seems. The popular movie star now tells us that after a few hours in the sun with her favorite colander, she’s got all the freckles she needs.
