LOONEY
BIRD'S

Keeping pace with trends.

The theme restaurant trend is far from new. Food and social settings or food and entertainment have been linked to the days of man: dancers at Greek and Roman feasts, medieval court jesters, balladeers and minstrels at renaissance banquets, dinner theatre of the 60s and 70s, even hot dogs at yesterday's baseball game.

Each theme restaurant tries to create a unique atmosphere that caters to the growing appetite for diversion, entertainment, and interactivity. The Looney Bird's franchise provides entertainment variety, through more than 400 available shows and new customers who perform each night. And the palate-pleasing menu items, from pizza and pasta to barbecue ribs and desserts provide a strong formula for generating repeat business.

These are not just animated characters, marionettes, or puppets. These entertainers have internationally recognized names and identities:

Looney Bird -- a true visionary, an inventor with a theory on every subject.

Billy Bob Brockali - the down-home bear emcee that keeps Looney Bird's feet on the ground.

Mitzy Mozzarella -- an independent, positive role model--young girls' favorite.

Fatz Geronimo -- the charismatic, bass-voiced gorilla that sees humor in all situations, and that adults love.

Duke LaRue -- the simple, ballad-singing, "junk yard dog".

Beach Bear -- one cool dude on the cutting edge of cool: sets trends doesn't follow.

LOONEY
BIRD'S

Kids actually sing for their supper. Really. Kids and parents alike are welcome to participate in and select animated shows and Karaoke. Looney Bird's food and drink emporium is a new concept in family dining -- an evening out for the entire family. For example, a family enters the Looney Bird's complex, and kids take priority stage-side seating created just for them. Adults dine in comfort while enjoying the entertainment: Electronimation or live performances by kids (adults, too). Memories, from the wacky to the most touching, are made at a Looney Bird's restaurant. There are magical surprises with every new show, new audience, and new family that visits the Looney Bird's complex.

Founder and president of the franchisor, Looney Bird's, Inc. (LBI), Aaron Fechter is the creator of the Electronimation (animatronics) and Danceatronics seen at the Looney Bird's restaurant. For more than 20 years, Fechter has been on the cutting edge of animatronic technology which uses art, mechanics, electronics, video, music and humor to transport viewers into a magical world. These are not just animated characters, marionettes, or puppets.

Looney doesn't describe what makes this franchise different...

The intimate, colorfully decorated unit houses, a stage with a spotlight on kids and their talents.

The Rock-a-fire Explosion, the character rock and roll band, entertains and encourages kids to be themselves, shake-off shyness, and come out of their shell. At Looney Bird's restaurant, kids and parents watch wholesome shows incorporating elements of childhood fantasy.

Most animatronic shows must be programmed to run and shut off at set times. The problem is that customers may want to view the show when it's in the "off" mode, or the show runs without an audience. The exclusive and proprietary Select-A-Show panel lets customers choose from a variety of shows presented by the programmed schedule. Many hours of work by dedicated entertainers have helped to make the shows exciting. And new ones are being created continuously.

To further public exposure to the Looney Bird's concept, LBI has created a half-hour television show (advertisement) in which you, the franchisee, and your customers may star. The TV presentation features the Rock-A-Fire Explosion, emcees/franchisees, and customers performing.
